Small Canadian companies active in the international oil and gas arena face a unique set of challenges. These challenges include, country focus and project selection, opportunity identification and access, financial and technical credibility and most importantly money – debt and equity.

Since its inception in September 1999, Aventura Energy Inc., as a small Canadian purpose-built internationally focused exploration and production company, has successfully met these challenges employing a variety of creative and unique strategies. These strategies included:

- Establishing strategic alliances with an intermediate public Canadian oil and gas company and a merchant bank
- Acquiring a base Canadian asset
- Establishing relationships with potential financiers
- Building relationships with key industry and government people in focus countries
- Employing an internationally experienced senior management team.
